

Seismocardiography is a new, non-invasive technique developed for recording and analyzing cardiac vibratory activity. Recent studies of seismocardiograms (SCGs) have demonstrated that they are a potential technique for detecting coronary artery disease. Using this absolutely non-invasive method, a new field of monitoring heart rate variability was opened up.