

This paper is focused on retinal blood vessels segmentation in the optical coherence tomography (OCT) data. The blood vessels create important features for monomodal or multimodal registration of retinal images (for example OCT images and images taken by the fundus camera). Segmented blood vessels can also improve the retinal layer segmentation.