

We proposed a new procedure which allows the nonlinear estimation of the states and parameters of the hemodynamic model from blood oxygen level dependent (BOLD) responses. This method which combines the cubature Kalman filter and the particle filter provides more accurate estimate of the hemodynamics compared to individual utilization of these filters. The performance of our approach is demonstrated on simulated data.