

obtaining more accurate results for the fMRI data. Of particular interest is the application of the approach to analysis of the functional brain connectivity.

Figure 3. Results example.

References

- [1] Berns GS. Continuous functional magnetic resonance imaging reveals dynamic nonlinearities of "dose-response" curves for finger opposition. Journal of Neuroscience 1999; 19:1-6.
- [2] Friston KJ, et al. Nonlinear responses in fMRI: the Balloon model, Volterra kernels, and other hemodynamics. NeuroImage 2000; 12:466-477.
- [3] Van der Merwe R. The unscented particle filter. Advances in Neural Information Processing Systems 2001; 584-590.
- [4] Arasaratnam I, Haykin S. Cubature Kalman Filter. IEEE Transactions on Automatic Control 2009; 54:1254-1269.
- [5] Riera JJ, et al. A state-space model of the hemodynamic approach: nonlinear filtering of BOLD signals. NeuroImage 2004; 21:547-567.